INDEPENDENT STUDENT STATUS

If you are considered a dependent student according to Department of Education guidelines and believe your circumstances may qualify you as an independent student, you can appeal your dependency status. Some situations that may merit an appeal include:

- recently married
- physical abuse
- abandonment
- parental drug abuse
- parental mental incapacity

Please note that self-sufficiency or unwillingness on the part of your parent(s)/step-parent to assist you financially is not a basis for an appeal in the absence of extenuating circumstances.

STATEMENT AND DOCUMENTATION

You must provide a written personal statement describing your circumstances and include supporting documentation. Your statement should be complete and specific. All information that you provide will be held in the strictest confidence.

Note: Students who were considered independent for the 2017-2018 academic year must update their existing file and verify that their status has not changed. Due to federal regulations, students may not automatically qualify for independent status based on previous years' information.

Please complete this form and attach the following documents:

- A signed completed 2018-2019 FAFSA*
- A copy of your 2016 and 2017 federal IRS Tax Return Transcripts and most recent W-2 forms *

- Signed statements explaining your circumstances from two or more professional adults, who may include: clergy, court officials, guidance counselors, teachers, professors, doctors, family counselors, mental health professionals, or law enforcement officers.
- A copy of your spouse's 2016 and 2017 federal IRS Tax Return Transcripts and most recent W-2 forms, if applicable*
- Copy of official marriage license, if applicable*
